Miami's Diaz Reus Rolff & Targ has announced it is officially entering the Asian legal market by opening an office in Shanghai. The office is expected to open in September.

The firm named Adam Ehrlich head of the office. Ehrlich has nine years of experience with a concentration in international business. Prior to joining Diaz & Reus, he was of counsel to Concord & Co., a Shanghai-based law firm.

"As the world continues its move toward globalization, we feel there is an undeniable and dynamic opportunity in China, because of its successful and consistent trade with Latin America and the Middle-East in the rapidly expanding global economy," Michael Diaz, Jr., the firm's managing partner, said in a news release.

The firm currently has eight worldwide locations.
